This is the 28th consecutive Annual Exhibition of Advertising and Editorial Art sponsored by the Art Directors Club of New York.

Over the years these exhibitions have reflected the varied forms of visual presentation current in advertising and publishing. The Annuals published from the exhibits are the only permanent record of the most distinguished art designed for publication. There is no other—and we are proud of their existence. Ever aware of the value of the traditional and “tried and true” forms of advertising and editorial art, we have always endeavored to keep the exhibitions representative.

In our efforts to procure the finest work, we have tried many different types of jury systems from year to year. And in the best interest of our profession we adhered to our policy of producing a yearly record of what was always something more than just a cross section.

This year the show is in the direction of the more progressive forms of design and art—a healthy stimulus for advertising and publishing.

We are grateful to the Museum of Modern Art for their interest and cooperation.

Lester Rondell, President of Art Directors Club of New York

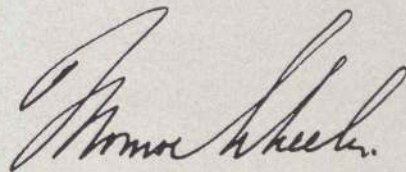

The 28th Annual National Exhibition of Advertising and Editorial Art of the Art Directors Club of New York reflects progress in one of the most active and fascinating forms of art in the modern world.

Art and commerce have frequently been linked in our own day as in the past, and cooperation between them is a satisfying achievement but by no means an easy one. The jury of this exhibition which examined 7200 entries has attempted to select examples where the demands of both art and commerce are harmoniously fulfilled. To whatever degree they succeeded you will find this an instructive, constructive exhibition.

It is illuminating and exciting to see what happens when an art director is in command of his job, when he is given the opportunity to select the best technical and artistic assistance and weld them into a creative whole. Under such happy circumstances his work will show true distinction and will not fail to focus attention surely and quickly on the client's message.

But there are many ways of catching the reader's attention and even of selling him a product or a service through advertising. If this were the end of the story, there would be little need for art directors; and no need at all for artists or museums to be interested in art direction. The staying power of advertising art, so important to many clients, calls for a first rate subtle performance. At this point the art director rightly looks to the adventurous and inventive modern artist for inspiration. And at this point many a client balks. I think this exhibition will demonstrate that the advanced art of today is a rich vein successfully worked by many of the best art directors. If advertising clients can be persuaded by their art directors that modern design is the key to successful selling and long range prestige, it is not only the client who will benefit but also the living artist and, not least, the public at large. Certain of these entries were granted medals by the Advisory Board of the Art Directors Club. In most cases the jury was entirely in agreement with the Advisory Board's awards, but there were notable exceptions. In closing, may I say that the jury was particularly disappointed in the caliber of realistic art work presented. Realism has been developed as one of the finest forms of modern art for some twenty years; this development has shown extraordinary vitality and flexibility. Yet almost no use of this was visible in the thousands of entries reviewed; a fact puzzling in the extreme.

Monroe Wheeler, Chairman of the Jury, Director of Exhibitions and Publications, Museum of Modern Art

MODERN MADONNA
by Clara Knapik

Bugs in your Boston Budget?

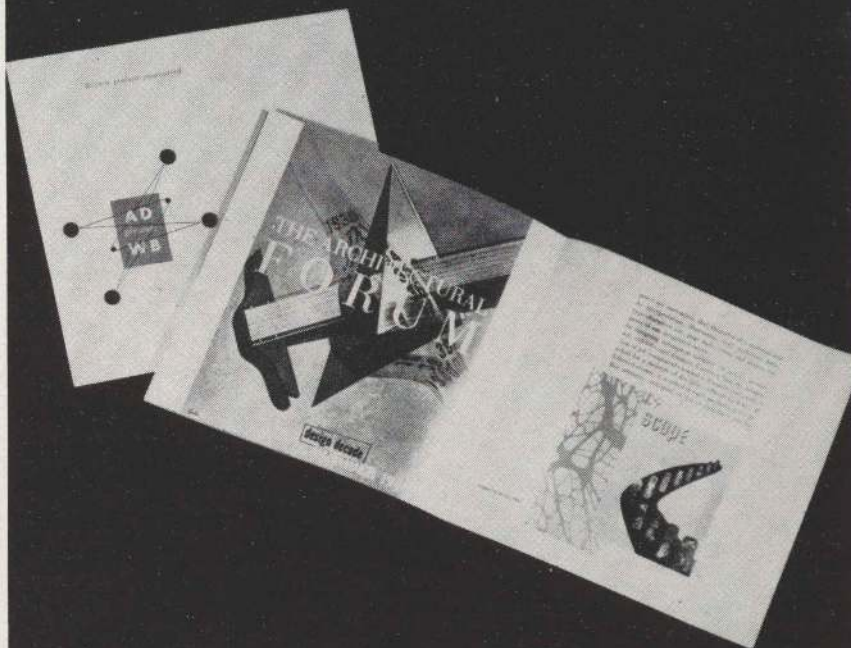

WEEI in Boston can get up to them, too!

Like this: Six years ago, Stone & Barber—furniture manufacturers—opened a store 14 miles from Boston. They sought participation on WEEI's "Possible Furniture" Today, with a theme: any showroom, they call themselves "the business Prescilla Bull," and say "she brings us more customers than four other Boston storefront combined!"

No wonder more Boston advertisers meet more money—and make more sales—on WEEI than on any other station.
